

« With a Master's in business law and degrees in real estate (real estate management, real estate law and expertise), I worked in a law firm and wanted to fill a position of corporate legal advisor. It therefore seemed necessary to combine my legal knowledge with the practice of corporate management to understand the strategic challenges faced by businesses. This is just as valid for law firms, which usually work on behalf of companies.

The Master's in Management of Legal Affairs at Paris Executive Campus is the keystone for legal advisors as, in addition to painting a highly pragmatic picture of law, it teaches about finance, strategy and management – subjects which are essential for me to understand today so as to make decisions in my company. »
